

Brooklyn Penthouse Seeks Record $19.5 Million; London Home Prices to Soar

Brooklyn's Priciest Condominium Hits the Market, Asking $19.5 Million

Dumbo's tallest condominium building, Olympia, has just taken another borough superlative: its 4,928-square-foot penthouse recently hit the market, asking \$19.5 million, which makes it the most expensive listing in Brooklyn.

The penthouse is one of two within the Hill West-designed building and features five bedrooms, four-and-a-half bathrooms, and more than 550 square feet of outdoor space. Interiors were designed by Workstead and provide ceiling heights up to 18.5 feet, high-end appliances from brands like Bosch and Gaggenau, custom wet bars, and floor-to-ceiling windows that give way to stunning views of Manhattan. Among the building's 38,000 square feet of amenities are a two-lane bowling alley, a fitness center with a spin studio, three pools (including a lap pool), and a juice bar.

If the penthouse sells for its asking price, it will set a record for the most expensive condominium sold in Brooklyn, ousting the current record-holder, the 2017 sale of the three-story penthouse at 1 Main Street in Dumbo for $15 million.
